HOME AND FRIENDS.

BY CHARLES SWAIN.

Oh, there's a power to make each hour As sweet as heaven designed it; r need we roam to bring it home, Though few there be that find it! We seek too high for things close by. And lose what nature found us;

For life hath here no charms so dear As Home and Friends around us! We oft destroy the present joy For future hopes-and praise them Whilst flowers as sweet bloom at our feet, If we'd but stoop to raise them !

For things afar still sweetest are en youth's bright spell bath bound us; But soon we're taught that earth had nought Like Home and Friends around us!

The friends that speak in time of need, When Hope's last reed is shaken, To show us still, that, come what will,

We are not quite forsaken : hough al were night; if but the light Of Priendship's altar crown'd us, I would prove the bliss of earth was this-are no weeds to destroy; and in fact it should be the object to keep, rather than to get, them out of beds. Hoeing makes the ground sweet, and open to the atmosphere; whereby the crops are much sooner brought to maturity, and in greater perfection .-Strange as it may seem, keeping the surhe Pragrictors) intil arrentages are paid face light and porous, will prevent the parching effects of drought. Thus, in a dry season, a well-tilled garden, suffers less than a field of grain on the opposite side of the fence.

> During the day time, the loose soil imbibes heat freely, and transmits it to the most distant rootlets, securing to them that warmth which is so essential to a vigorous growth; but, at the approach of evening, when the temperature of the air falls, a reversed action takes place, and the heat is radiated or thrown off quite as rapidly as it was received. If, on a hot day, you fill a pitcher with cold water, in a few moments you will find the outside covered with maisture and it is a common expression that " the pitcher sweats." Instead, however, of the drops having been drawn through the pures of the vessel like perspiration through the skin, they are drops of vapor condensed from the surrounding air upon the cold pitcher. So with the soil at evening; as soon as by the radiation of heat it becomes colder than the atmo sphere, that moisture which we call dew is condensed, and transmitted to the roots, -The extent of this beautiful operation is just in proportion to the louseness of the surface. Thus Cobbett says, " A man spade, in a day, than he can pour on the earth out of a watering pot in a mouth."

We shall say nothing upon the chemical action of the air upon an open soil, which might involve us in some tedious disquisition, but, instead thereof, relate an experiment made by Curwen, an eminent agriculturist. He planted cabbages upon a piece of ground so stiff and forbidding that the neighbors considered his labor lost .-Not discouraged by their sneers, he took a horse and cultivator, and subjected the land to almost constant stirring throughout the season. The end of the matter was, that he gathered an immense crop-some each." - Gardeners' Text Book

THE POINTS OF A GOOD WORKING OX .-The head should be long and slender .-The short headed ox may start tolerably quick at the whip, but will soon forget it. The eye should be sharp but pleasant .--The black eyed ox is apt to run away .-For strength he should have a good bosom. - For travelling the legs should be straight and the ankle smaller than the foot; the toe should be directly forward. If the animal toe out the knee will bend in, and the leg will be as much weaker than a straight one, as a crooked stick is weaker than a straight one for bearing a weight placed upon the top of it; with such a form the inside claw is liable to be strained. Avoid the long, peaked hoof. Let the back be straight from head to tail-though from the hips backwards, if he slope a little it is not much a fault ; but don't let him rise in that part. For hardihood the round built or round ribbed ox-one that is not in danger of knocking his hips off in going through the woods is best. He should be trained to the yoke quite young-Three pairs early put to work, but not overworked, would do as much labor as four pairs that are not broken until they have nearly attained their growth.

MEDICAL HERBS .- Gather medical herbs and plants in sunshing weather, and cure them thoroughly in the shade; place them in close bags, labeled with the name of their contents, and hang them in some secure place where they will be kept perfectly dry and fit for immediate use. A very little attention to this, and a slight knowledge of the nature of diseases, will often enable us to dispense with a physician, and prevent much suffering. Burdock, mullen, featherfew, life-everlasting, tanzy, spearmint, penny-royal, mother-wort, worm-wood, horse radish leaves, life of man (root) old man root, smart weed, golden wire (root,) blood root, snake root, sarsaparilla, and an almost endless variety of other roots and herbs, are useful for this purpose and often effects most happy cures in cases where regular practitioners of the healing art, with their medical compounds

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 8, 1857

All that has been said and written in regard to Africa, is small and insufficient when compared to the amount of information continually brought to us from all other quarters of the globe, and we are almost as ignorant of what constitutes life and good manners in the interfer of that sun-scorched land as in the days of Munco Pann. Explorations into the farmeres have been made of late years; the blood-thirsty lien and elephant hunters have sur mounted the obstacles and defied the diseases of the country, for the sake of murdering these terrible animals, and in their parrations we get some elight insight into the mysteries that hang like a well over every portion of the country, and which has defied all attempts to remove it or to penetrate beyond given limits. The malaria, the uncertainty of life in the bush, and the dangerous character of the native chiefs, have all had a tendency to curb curlosity, and these who have surmounted all these have not worked in unison, or have made their explorations at periods so far distant that their notes are of little value in a commercial point of view, and interest more for their nevelty than from any benefit to be derived by the world from them.

That the interior is not one vast and desert has been proved by Andresson, the travelor, who there discovered a lake, of which much has been said, but which in reality is but an insignificant sheet of water and only to be noticed from the fact that it is the only one of importance there with which we have any acquaintance. Its whole circumference miles, its average breadth seven miles, and not exceeding nine in its widest parts. Its shores are less and sandy, without a tree or bush, or any other kind of vegetation within half a mile and more commonly a mile. Beyond this arid circle there is a luxuriant show of vegetation-majestic troce of beautiful and dense foliage, not unfrequently attaining a girth of from sixty to seventy feet round the atem. The outlet is a stream running cast a distance of about three hundred miles, taking all its windings into account, when it is lost in an immense sand marsh.

The inhabitants have no belief in a Supreme Being; their ideas of life are exceedingly limited and they have no accupies of conscience to govern them. Might makes right to trely estimation, and the only difference between a man and his dog is that the former is the bigger raque of the two-They have dealers in the black art, and among the wisards the rain-makers are the most influential. Their dead they bury, and on the approaching disediation of a man, a skin or not is thrown over the bedy, which is kept in a sitting posture, with the knees doubled up under the chin, until life is extines. Then the ceremonies attending the burial of the dead, which are equally singular, take place, she most marked of which is, the body, having the head covered is conveyed through a hele made for the purpose in the bease and the surrounding fence, and definited in the grave in a sitting position, were being taken to face the corpse against the

They are exceedingly vindictive and revengelui and from the king to the slave, theft is a prevailing vice. Of clothing they have the most scanty supply, and, delighting in finary, they encircle their arms and ankles with rings of copper and brass --They think it very absurd in Europeans to put their arms and legs into bags, wonder why buttons are used for any other purpose than as ornaments te be worn around the neck, and think it far more becoming to aneint the tody with greate and red echre, than to wash it daily with water. But they have one habit in common with elvi-

Bred nations, and that is, a fundness for smuff-taking, only that they have a way of their ewn when they indulge their teste for it. European snuff is not half pungent enough for them, and to make the soull peppery, they take a piece of tobacce and earefully grind it to a powder between two stones; then they add to it a sufficient quantity of word ashes and rub the whole together. Of this campound each one takes a large pinch in the palm of his hand, and sorapos it into his nose with a poon-Harly shaped iron or trory aroan, and drawing every grain leisurely up into the nestrils in such a manner as to force tears igto their eyes. A Perservine Loves.—A young lady possessed of beauty, accomplishments, and having $15,000 in hard cash on deposit at St. Louis, started recently on a trip to New York in company with her aunt. She took passage on the stormer Tennessee Bell from Keckuk to Cincinnal. On the same beat was a young man who had plenty of everything but money; he had impertured her at home, and kept up his ardent courtship on board the boat. The lady, however, was hard-hearted and refused to give him the least hope. The boat stopped awhile at Careston, Kontucky, and the lady and her aunt oncluded to take a stroll on shore; as she was going down the gangway plank, it tilted, and the lady for the water. ford; and it is proposed to hold a public meeting in the Court House in Greensboro, on the 17th of September next, for the purpose of organizing a Greene Monument Association.

North Carolina testified years ago her approximation of the important services rendered not only the State, but the country, by this distinguished patriot and sodier. In 1782, the General Association of the Association and Sodier in the Country five thousand a resolit and should be alloted for and given to Major. land should be alleted for and given to Major General Nathaniel Greene, his beies or assigns. within the Lounds of the lands reserved for the use of the army, to be laid off by the aforesaid Cemmissioners. (Absalom Tatom, Isaac Shelby, and Anthony Bledsoe, Fagrs.) as a mark of the high honor this State entertains of the extraordionly services of that brave and gallant officer The Commissioners, in pursuance of this provision, had 25,000 neres of land surveyed on Ruck Rive, in Maury county, Tennessee, in the vicinity of the present flourishing town of Columbia. There are few tracts in the Union of the same extent of equal fertility; and a million of dollars is a moderate est mate of its value at the present

But, leaving out of view this magn floort dona tion,—magnific ut as compared with those of other States to Gen. Growne, or to any other of the heroes of the revolution,—it seems to us pe euliarly apprepriate that a summmental shaft should raise in honor of him who gave at Guilford Court House, the turning point in the war of the revolution. The importance of this bettle has been overlooked by historia a. It was here that Cornwall's received a check which was equivaevered the influence of which was felt until da final consequence at Jamestown.

It is proper that the recollections of such a bat

the should be kept alive not alone by the pen of history, but by those outward symbols of respect which the gratitude of man devises in honer of ilustrious events .- Wilmington (N C) Herald.
